Hongkons, January 18th, 1872. It is a well known fact that there is no better means for judging of a man's true character than noticing him in the witness box, and that many who are thoroughly able to is in them in an ordinary become suite translucent when they give testimony in a Court Something of this effect seems to have been produced by the examination of Sir R. ALCOCK before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, and we can only regret that some of the Hon. Members of that Committee were not in Hongkong when Sir RUTHERFORD made his declarations concerning the proposed convention, as their shrewd and pointed questions would have gone, far towards elucidating the truth of what Sir RUTHERFORD, before a less skilled assembly, contrived to place in so pleasing and plausible a light. From beginning to end Sir Rutherford's evidence is a tissue of inconsistencies and a studied evasion giving direct and decided answers on every practical matter. Instead of directing his replies to the points upon which the Committes desires information, he commences with a set speech explanatory of his negotiations with the Tsung-le Yamen and the very confidential terms upon which he stood with Prince Kung and WENSIANG, during the interview when these Celestial magnates unbosomed their grief, nobody being present but Sir RUTHERIORD and his Chinese Secrewith servants or persons outside the circle. It is very interesting to learn exactly how Sir Butherroup was duped from so good an authority as himself. The confidential Mandarins wax mightily moral, assure Sir | reports brought by the steamers Glendarrock RUTHERFORD that the foreign opium traffic will provoke Eesven's condemnation of men, came off at high water, proceeding to Whamand delicately hat that it is not at all unlikely that in order to put down this crying evil, the prohibitions on the growth of native opium, will be withdrawn as a temmeasure. This being embodied in a despatch is transmitted to Sir RUTHERFORD, who observes that he thinks the Committee will consider it a very significant document. It is not at all unlikely that they did. The ruse completely succeeded. Sir Ruthebrord commenced to institute enquiries, of course through native sources, and found-how wonderful!-that LI Hung Chune had actively employed himself both in Hukwang and Honan in premoting the the Berlin Ministerial organ, declares that cultivation of the poppy. He swallowed the the recent re-establishment of diplomatic relabait, hook and all. So the result of Sir RUTHERFORD's confidential interview with the Chinese Ministers was that he set about doing precisely Government were seriously contemplating, if they could not come to any terms or arrange. given for the rent of the tables and a small cash ment with the Eritish Government for restricting, the are of growth in India, and thought they would be able to stamp out the opium produce among themselves. I thought it an advantage, but the merchants did not like it." to pay money to people, who profess themselves not only not desirous, but most unwilling to receive it, and without any guarantee that the restrictions which were threatened would not be put in force in favour of the native product. Sir R. ALCOCK, however, as the Chinese were insisting and consenling to the total probibition of opium, thought to get them to consent to admit it as a legitimate article of commerce, and held that to get them to take an increased revenue from it, was in fact "getting them to take a retaining fee in our cause." Considering that opium was already admitted as a "legitimate article of commerce" by the treaty, Sir R. ALCOCK admits that he offered the Chinese a "retaining fee" o Tls. 1,600,000 not to evade the terms of the freaty; when in another part of his evidence before the Committee he also admits that he doubts their power to carry out their threat, though it will be recollected that he affected very little doubt of it when explaining his negotiations at Pekin is, to drop the mild eupheuism of "retaining fee," that he bribed proceeds of 10 bales Jeans, ex Chinaman the Chinese Government to set aside their

SCUTILING A SHIP.

(Daily News.) A most curious story comes to us from th United States of America. It is a tale told of vormment, as the public mind was excited, and the daily offairs of life. We have continually begged it to publish a correct version of the heard of the impression made upon uncared. Wong a-wai, a coolie, and Low-a-shung, a fish- affair. The decree of suspension confounds the for juvenile scamps by romances of burglary, the two professions of patriotism and pocket, criminals concerning whom they read. But fined $1, and the others were let off at 50 cents vocated Republicanism because they believed who has an uncommon reputation for sagacity, that the advantages they sought for themselves a reputation which he certainly sustained in voyage had been registered for Hongkong. But, in the following September the sailname of Robert Bruce, called at the office of one of the owners, insisting upon hushscuttle as a crime; the gentleman threatened treated this menace with contempt, whereupon the end, or at all events gave way to something one of a stronger kind. Soon he returned with the same assertion against the master. Each of these individuals pretended to have lost from four to six bundred dollars' worth of kit. They so singularly like "Foul Play," that as the expect. Our Paris Correspondent expresses his trial went on the judge was induced to inquire | belief that "before or shortly after New Year's Therefore let the chignon become "small by degrees and beautifully less." Glad as we should be to see the chignon disappear, a gentle sadness steals over our mind as we think how much its abolition will interfere with the trade of the doctor. What is to become of the "chignon-headache?" The doctors, poor men, must bow to their fate like the barbers, and the frowey young women of Brittany and the Penitentiaries. whose locks will bereafter be of "no use to any one but the owner." Seriously, it is quite hair have allowed themselves to be "sat upon," by this fashiou got up for the benefit of the bald headed few. If the thorough vulgarising of a fashion is sure to lead to its death, the chignon will certainly not last long. The Dol. ly Varden costume soon went out of fashion after it bud taken hold of the "gorgeous east' at Whitechapel, and the chignon has long been rampant in those Oriental quarters. Chignons may last a little longer, but a note of warning has been sounded that may induce the economical to avoid the expense of a "new suit of hair" until the prospects of the future become

A sad affair has taken place near Nuneaton, in Warwickshire. Dr. Eaton, a medical man of some standing, having been to visit a patient six miles off that place on Friday night, set off to return at about ten o'clock, and was found two bouys recently placed by the French Clovthe next morning sitting on the side of the ernment to mark the shore ends of the above road by his horse and trap, in a dying state, cable landed at Capo St. James. He had evidently missed his road, and coming to a water-course had been thrown out, his clothes being saturated and stiff with frost. Brandy was administered, and he was taken home, but died soon after his arrival.

(Daily News.) TURSDAY, November 21st.

Yesterday the thoroughfare connecting the eastern end of Fleet-street with the Holbornviaduct was thrown open to the public. It is about a quarter of a mile in length, and has been carried out at a cost about £45,000. Mr. T. Hughes, M.P., presided last evening at the opening autumnal meeting of the Social Science Association, when the principles and the working of the co-operative movement formed the principal topic of discussion. Sir C. Dilke's recent speech at Newcastle bas been the subject of much comment in Leeds, where the hon, baronet has been announced to lecture. The controversy has elicited a declaration from Alderman Carter, M.P., that if anything disrespectful to her Majesty were uttered, he would at once leave the chair. The speech was also the topic of discussion at a meeting of the London democrate last night. A numerously attended Conference, under the situation, in one hour's time, and at a very auspices of the Liberation Society, was held small cost. IMPERIAL QUARTO. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONAR WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. Architects, Civil Engineers, &c. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

MOh scope and practical service this Work stands purivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

The scope of the work is so great, and its utilitarian purposes so complete, that a rewith natives who understand nothing but Chi-China, and to the natives themselves it explaine subjects fully, with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. Extracts. Marriage among the Bedawin Arabs. Bedawin of Sinai is thus conducted: the inhis own, he places the folded turban between ing to give your daughter in marriage to abba (or mantle) in his hand, which he suddenly throws over her, exclaiming: "The name of God be with thee! none shall take thee but 'such an one." naming her intended bushend. There were the strong and the strong and the strong are broken as a suddenly throws over her, exclaiming: "The signed to the public—in which five hundred might commodiously sit—ten thousand perhusband. Thereupon the girl starts up and tries to escape, calling upon her father and mother for help, with loud cries and shrieks, and into one's sides, the furious of Insurance at the current rates of the contract of the squeezing, the policies of Insurance at the current rates of Above 6 months the full annual rate.

CARLOWITZ & CARLOWI Khatib's words is noisy chorus, and utter the orected for her in front of her father's habitation, to which she is conducted, and then sprinkled with the blood of a sheep sacrificed for the occasion. Here she remains for three days, at the end of which she is conducted and, after performing her ablutions, is led home to the house of her husband, who makes a great feast in her honour. The neighbours also sacrifice a sheep as a contrithe ceremony, a trifling present in money from the father of the bride. The Emzeineh are the only tribe who depart in any degree from these observances, and with them the three days, instead of remaining in a tent near her father. The passion of love is not unknown amongst the Arabs of the desert. The greater freedom enjoyed by the Bedawi girl as compared with the close seclusion of harem life in the towns, and the unrestrained intercourse of the sexes, especially during the great national festivals at the tomb of their saints, often engender such attachments. When a girl who has thus bestowed her affections on the man of her choice is compelled by her friends to espouse another, she takes advantage of the three days' grace allowed her, to escape to the tents of some of the neighbours, and throwing herself on their protection, refuses to leave until the unwelcome suitor has relinquished his claims, and an arrangement has been entered into between her lover and her relatives. The story of Jebel el Benat, "the Girls' mount," presents an interesting instance of these romantic attachments; two girls who were to be married to men they did not like escaped to the mountains and perished of hunger, rather than prove faithless to their lovers. Burckhardt says they twisted their hair together and precipitated themselves from the cliffs, but this part of the story is now forgotten in Sinai .- The Desert of the Exodus, By E. H. Palmer.
